Editors of the Union : GENTLEMEN-I have seen of late many articles in the several daily papers of Nashville urging employees, mechanics, t make this place their home when Government work is ended. You invariably tell us that we can make money by stayingsu inducement that looks well on pape Sat grant that we could make money by staying, who will tell us how much could all average—a few thousands during a whole life-time. Money inducement alone won't do, gentlemen. We know that if we ter. The brief initial article on Grant, is just and suggestive, the sketch of the notes as anyment has been stopped.

The Soldier's Love.

In addition to the articles with these titles there is much other reading matter. White, for $120, 340 a note of $34, 340 and $120, 340 would not be educated. How many Nashville mechanics can afford to keep their children in school when tuition is six, eight or ten dollars a mouth?

We subjoin a selection. It is of the Lois can be seen at our office.

W. MATT. BROWN & CO., If you want the Northern mechanics to an elegant and touching record of mayla-lw settle in Tennessee you must induce the an incident in the life of one of the Legislature to provide a system of public noblest of Tennessee's matrons—a woschools that will insure the education of every boy and girl in the State. Do it and many will stay. MEGHANIC. In response to our correspondent we can say that the mechanics of Nashville have always received good wages As a class they have been industrious, thrifty and respected. Many of them have accumulated fortunes, and others have filled various offices of honor and profit. There has never been in Nashville a prejudice against them, such as has prevailed further South. It is true that there have been, are still, and ever will be, men in our midst, having more money than brains, more pride than judgment, who regard the working man as beneath them, but they are not peculiar to Nashville. They are to be found everywhere. Happily they do not give tone to general society. Their views and vulgar notions may have weight with a few exclusives equally foolish, but with the great mass of our population merit is the standard of the man, rich or poor,-a man of leisure or a mechanic. As Nashville increases in free population, in manufactures, in trade and commerce, there will be still greater social equality, and it will be difficult to keep any one down without inst cause. Our correspondent is sojourning in Nashville at a very unfortunate period to form a proper idea of the educational advantages afforded her chil dren. There are, at present, but few schools in the city; and they are private and tuition high, so high that many a parent is compelled to teach his children at home, or let them go untaught. This is one of the evil results of the war. When peace is fully established, we may expect a change vastly for the better. Previous to the war, we had public free-schools, where the children of the rich and the poor were educated together. They were largely attended, and proved a blessing to thousands of children. We know of numerous mechanics' children educated in them, who are fine scholarsproficient in all the branches of Engish Education, in French and in Latin. Some of them are now enjoying good positions as clerke, professional and business men, ornaments to society, honored Alumni of our free schools, and the pride of their parents. These schools have been suspended for several years, but the tax for their support is continued, and a considerable sum is at present in the City Treasury to their credit. So soon as peace and quiet are restored, and the Government censes to occupy the school bouses, the schools can and doubtless will be resumed, and become as flourishing as ever. So if our correspondent, and his brother mechanics in Government employ, should determine to cast their lots with us, they need have no fears on the score of the education of their children We have children who were educated in our free schools, and feel deeply grateful to the public spirit which initiated and kept up these institutions, and to the able management which made them successful. We have other children also to educate. If we believed with a "Mechanic" that they could not be educated here, as the oth-

> Hetty McEwen. An Incident of the Occupation of Nashville,

BY LUCY HAMILTON HOOPER. O Hetty McEwen, Hetty McEwen! What were the angry robels doing, That autumn day, in Nashville town? They looked aloft with eath and frown, And saw the Stars and Stripes wave high Against the blue of the sunny sky; Deep was the oath, and dark the frown, And loud the shout of "Tear it down."

For over Nashville, far and wide, Rebel banners the breeze defied, Staining heaven with crimson bars Only the one old "Stripes and Stars" Waved, where autumn leaves were strewing, Round the home of Hetty McEwen.

Hetty McEwen watched that day Where her son on his death-bed lay; She heard the hearse and angry cry,— The blood of "'76" rose high. Out-flashed her eye, her cheek grew Up rose her aged, stately form; From her window, with steadlast brow,

She looked upon the crowd below. Eyes all atlame with angry fire Firshed on her in defiant ire, And once more rose the angry call, "Tear down that flag, or the house shall Never a single inch qualled she, Her answer rang out firm and free: "Under the roof where that flag flies, Now may sou on his death-bed lies; Born where that banner floated high, 'Nesth its folds he shall surely die. Not for threats nor yet for sning Shall it fall," said Hetty McEwen.

The loyal heart and stendfast hand Claimed respect from the traitor-band The fiercest rebel quaited that day Before that woman, stern and grey. They went in silence, one by one,-Left her there with her dying son, And left the old flag floating free For the bravest heart in Tennessee, To wave in loyal splandor there pon the treason-tainted air. Until the rebel rule was o'er And Nashville town was ours once more

Came the day when Fort Donelson Fell, and the rebel reign was done; And into Nashville, Buell then, Marched with a hundred thousand men, With waving flags and rolling drums Past the heroine's house he comes; He checked his steed and bared his head, Soldiers I salute that fing," he said; "And cheer, boys, cheer!-give three times three For the bravest woman in Tennesseel' NASHVILLE, May 12th, 1865.

KOTTOR NASHVILLE UNION We desire to suggest, through your columns, to Mr. Joseph R. Dillin, Supervising Special Agent of the Treasury Department, to withdraw all permits from parties throughout this State, who did not vote for ratification and for Governor and members of the Legislature, and give their permits to men who are for the government. A great many men have permits to do business who are so embittered against the government that they never attend a union meeting, and instead of attending a union meeting they lock themselves up in their counting rooms at night to see how many greenbacks
